ABORIGINAL TRIBAL REGION IN WHICH THE COLLEGE IS SITUATED

From Norman B. Tindale's book, "Aboriginal Tribes of Australia", published 1974, and accompanying map, Tribal Boundaries in Aboriginal Australia, drawn by Winifred Mumford on a base map produced by the Division of National Mapping, Department of National Development, Canberra, Australia, it is indicated that Roseworthy Agricultural College is situated in the Kaurna* Aboriginal Tribal Region. Reference book South Australian State Library - Special Collection 572.8991, T588, b, S.P. and Map Section Reference 804e, c, d, 1974/2, S.W. Sheet. See accompanying map extract.

Permission has been kindly given by Dr Norman B. Tindale vide his letter 12/2/1988 to use the following extracts and accompanying map.

Extracts from Tindale's book "Aboriginal Tribes of Australia":

p. 213 Kaurna.
Located Cape Jervis to Port Wakefield along eastern shore of Gulf St Vincent, inland to near Crystal Brook, Snowtown, Blyth, Hoyleton, Hamley Bridge, Clarendon, Gawler and Myponga; from the east of the Hummocks Range to Red Hill where northern hordes were sometimes known as the Nantuwarra. Inland the Jultiwira or Stringy Bark forests of the Mount Lofty ranges marked their boundaries. The Kaurna were the southern most tribe to perform the initiatory rite of circumcision. Their territory was very correctly indicated as 2,800 square miles (7,200 sq. km) with a population of 650 in the South Australian Register of 30 January 1842. Ivaritji, the last woman survivor, who died in 1931, provided much of our scanty knowledge of the Kaurna.

p. 73 Reference - Cape Jervis, the southern most horde of the Kaurna.

p. 60 There was little or no residence in the mountains by the Kaurna.

p. 71 The Kaurna people of the Adelaide plains, who tended to live along the coasts during summer months to take advantage of the mulloway fishing, and then to camp near the coastal springs, retreated to more wooded areas in winter to obtain timber for fires and to make use of log and Stringy Bark shelters. They brought the bark sheets down from the hill country to the east.

p. 60 To the west, on the Adelaide Plains, were the Kaurna, practising only the rite of circumcision without many of the ritual celebrations that come with the more drastic subincisional practices. They were nomadic to a greater degree but living in areas so relatively well watered that the main seasonable movements were the only forced ones they faced. Each horde tended to travel in summer along the coastal part of their hordal territory and they wintered in the timbered foothill country, sheltering in the cover of gigantic and often hollowed red gum trees along the river banks. Often as a basis for shelter they used a fallen tree, and hollowed out beneath it, a practice hazardous when floods and heavy rain destroyed their fires and flooded their sleeping places. In summer, of course, they did not live near these gigantic trees (Euc. camaldulensis) for under stress of summer heat red gum trees have a habit of suddenly throwing off great limbs apparently through build-up of osmotic pressure within their tissues. This was a happening sufficiently frequent to cause fear in them of the trees.

Figure 18 indicates a similar site of the Kaurna people at Morphett Vale some miles south of Adelaide, and the last place inhabited by them before final disruption following the death of the father of Ivaritji, the last woman survivor of the tribe. It was here that her father's body was trussed, rubbed with red ochre, and smoked over fire. Today his remains are in the Berlin Museum as a treasured relic.

PROCLAMATION OF HUNDRED OF MUDLA WIRRA AND ORIGINAL SURVEYS

Roseworthy Agricultural College is in the Hundred of Mudla Wirra, which name was proclaimed in Lieutenant Governor Robe's time, 30th November 1847 (P.9388), its position given as 34°28"S. by 138°41"E. with an area of 109.5 square miles. From reference book, Library of Survey Data Section, Lands Department.

The name, according to Noel A. Webb, signifies in the native language a forest from which implements were obtained, "mudla" meaning implements and "wirra" a forest (c) 5203/41. This information was obtained from a reference book in the Survey Data Section presently on the 3rd Floor, Education Building, Flinders Street.

From old Survey Plans held in the Survey Data Section of the Lands Department, the Sections which go to make up the College were surveyed as follows:

By James Brooks 1860 - Sect. 412 (Ebsary's), Sect. 404 (Crouch's D), Sects. 405, 505 and Pt. 408 (Churcher's).

By H.D. Packard 1863 - Sects. 686, 687, 690, 691, 693 and 694 original College land; Sect. 700 (Naboth's) and 406; Sect. 679 (Grainger's A & B); Sect. 685 (Daly's A, B & C); Sect. 689 (Crouch's A & B); and Section 695 (Crouch's C).

By H.D. Packard 1864 - Sect. 684 (Grainger's C), Sect. 688 (George's), Sects. 705 & 706 (Day's A, B & C), and Sects. 707 & 708 (Hentschke's).

By Alexander James Mitchell 1866 - Sect. 841 (Nottle's C and part B), Sect. 842 (Nottle's A & part B), Sects. 830 & 832 (Flett's A, B & C) and Sects. 840 & 833 (Mitchell's).

TOTAL AREA OF COLLEGE LAND UNTIL 1928

The area of the College (then called Experimental Farm) after the original purchase of Nottle the Elder's property 3.2.1882 was 728 acres. Also in 1882 Section 704 Crown Land never granted was added to the Experimental Farm. A notation made 11.2.1884 on the 2.11.1882 Framed Plan shows a Total Area of the Farm of 824 acres indicating the area of Section 704 added to the Farm was 96 acres, excluding area set aside for cemetery and stone reserve. At the time of Crouch's purchase 16.5.1928 the total deduced acreage is 2369.5 acres, yet the 1940 Prospectus of the College refers to 2343 acres, i.e. 26.5 acres less, with no apparent information as to the reason for the difference at this time.

FRAMED COPY OF 1882 PLAN OF THE COLLEGE (THEN KNOWN AS EXPERIMENTAL FARM) COPY OBTAINED FROM THE SURVEY DATA SECTION OF THE LANDS DEPARTMENT (Copies Annex C and D)

This plan was drawn by Charles Hope Harris 2.11.1882 after an internal survey made during the 18th. and 28th. September, 1882, after purchase 3.2.1882. The total area of the Farm was noted on the Plan as 824 acres as at 11.2.1884, which area included Section 704 Crown Land never Granted but added to the Experimental Farm in 1882. The land purchased is subdivided into paddocks numbered 1 to 15. Looking at the framed c.1935 Plan the general location of some of these paddock numbers was still evident, e.g. paddock 6-6A, 6B, 6C and 6D; Paddocks 4 & 5 - 4A, 4B and 5A, 5B; Paddocks 1, 3 & 7-7A, 7B and 3A,3B & 7; Paddock 8 (a reduced in size 8); Paddock 9 (a considerably reduced in size 9). The Principal's house and kitchen is shown and the dam south east became the swimming pool c.1935 Plan. The dam between paddocks 10 and 13 became the effluent dam just north west of the subsequent oval grandstand. The dam (making) near the south west boundary of Paddock 9 adjoined the poultry yards c.1935 Plan and later became an effluent dam.

The Licence 2435 relates to land used as the Roseworthy Rifle Club Range, about 20 metres wide by 570 metres long. The Licence was first issued by the Mudla Wirra South District Council 1.9.1928 for 5 years @ five shillings per annum. Further details are shown on copy of document annex E which was obtained from the Australian Archives. The mound for firing from still exists near the road at the southern end. The well shown near the south east corner has been filled in but there is still evidence with odd broken red bricks from the walls and some quartz from the subsoil on the surface.

The 1940 Prospectus indicates the original College estate was purchased and established as an experimental farm. Professor Custance, the first Principal, induced the government to establish an Agricultural College. "The erection of the main building was put in hand in 1883, and the Institution was opened to students early in 1885". This indicates the period as Experimental Farm may have been short lived - from 1882 to early 1885.

THE FRAMED ENLARGED COPY OF c1935 PLAN (Copy Annex F)

The Plan shows the early settler land owner names used as Paddock names. As land was purchased it is assumed that the new paddock adopted the name of its former owner. This was the practice for many years. Jack Phillips, a student 1923/1926, recalls that these names were all in use in his time, with the exception of Crouch's which was not bought until 1928.

The names as shown on the Plan were still being used in 1943 in which year the names changed to Paddocks North 4 etc. according to Compass direction and numbered. It is disappointing that the historic names were deleted. They are an important part of our history and must not be lost.

"Naboth's" however, was not an early settler name. According to Jack Phillips it was planted to old vines in 1923 and the origin of the name was biblical (First Book of Kings, Chapter 21, where Ahab, King of Samaria, coveted Naboth's vineyard which was hard by Ahab's palace and the subsequent events involving Jezebel.

A small bottle of Roseworthy wine, along with other artefacts in a "time capsule" was laid behind the foundation stone of the Bonython Building situated behind the South Australian Institute of Technology 3.10.1905. This was found when the building was demolished November 1987. Unfortunately the wine had dried and the bottle had no label. But it is interesting to know that there were vines sufficient and old enough for wine making in 1905. Jack recalls when he was at the College there was a wine course of short duration, some 6 to 12 months. They made wine and there were cellars. Jock Williams, who graduated in 1921, ran the wine course.

(Copy Annex G)

The original three photographs numbered 3371, 3372 and 3373 were obtained by courtesy of Captain P.C. Demaine, Officer Commanding Army Map Depot, Bandiana, Victoria. But unfortunately they did not cover the nothern most part of Flett's and "Mitchell's", the eastern corner of Nottle's, the western end of Grainger's, and the south western corner of Day's and all of "Hentschke's". Also, a negative had to be taken of the mosaic of some 6 photos for enlargement. Through Mr Max Foale of the Department of Geography, Adelaide University, the three photos were found to be from the "Gawler" Index Sheet 800, Zone 6 of Run 9. From the Index Sheet additional photo references that may be required were extracted. Following Mr Foale's suggestion, the whole work of selecting and making a mosaic of the photos to cover the College area, taking a negative off and the subsequent enlargement, were done by Air Photographics Pty Ltd., Hawthorn, Victoria.

The enlarged mosaic has an approximate metric scale of 1 : 10200 or 12.9 chains to 1".

Interesting features include the 8 hole golf course which started near the tennis courts and extended into Naboth's and back; the apparent crabholey nature of the soil in Ebsary's; stooked hay in Flett's C; the oval, cricket pitch and grandstand; the pine plantation passed on the way to the farm buildings; the one chain wide strip of cleared scrub for the rifle range and some 28 chains distant, the straw stack butts; the low lying area east of Naboth's covered in water - this always happened after heavy rains; the Plant Breeding Strips in the original 1882 Nottle Purchase and Grainger's C; the headland strip taken out in Day's B or the start of meadow hay making in that paddock; the open drain in Paddock 7a which took the piggery and dairy effluent is noticeable.

Subsequent purchases - "Hentschke's" 1964, "Mitchell's" 1966 and "Churcher's" 1971 are on the aerial but of course not margined.

A framed enlarged mosaic of photos taken 19.1.1987 (Copy Annex J) with the present day College area margined red can be compared with the framed 5.11.1935 photo (copy Annex G).

The mosaics and negatives of these enlarged aerial photos are held in the College library.
